This class goes way beyond gardening! What are we made of? How do we fit into nature and how can we use nature's wisdom to make our lives better? In this class we will use all kinds of methods to explore our roles as members of a community, an ecosystem, a planet...and, of course, we will be playing with soil, growing plants, and learning about companion planting, so make sure you bring clothes that don't mind a little dirt!

Instructor: Amanda Gordon holds a certificate in Permaculture Design and has worked on numerous farms as well as on natural building and social practice projects. She worked as an assistant to Merritt College's Permaculture guru Christopher Shein, and is perpetually amazed by the practical and imaginative insights that nature provides. With a holistic view of gardening and teaching, Amanda aims to teach sustainable practices in the garden and beyond and to help kids acquire the skills to be responsible stewards of their world.
